

Diminish wrinkles without surgery

Wilshire Aesthetics Laser Rejuvenation Clinic

Caring Safe Experienced Trusted

What is the Polaris WR?

The Polaris WR combines safe and effective levels of laser and radiofrequency energies to stimulate new collagen growth and create a smoother, softer appearance to the skin. Both laser and radiofrequency have been used separately for decades in medicine and surgery, but the Polaris WR exclusively combines light and radio-frequency energy for ideal outcomes with a very low risk of side effects and virtually no down-time.

What can I expect from treatments?

The Polaris WR can diminish moderate wrinkles, reduce enlarged pores, improve superficial acne scarring, and tighten skin laxity of the face and neck. These improvements can be done without surgery. Most people experience only slight or no pinkness after a treatment and are able to return to work immediately.

How many treatments are required and how frequently?

Most patients require between 3-5 treatments. Treatments are typically done 3-6 weeks apart.

Do the treatments hurt?

The sensation may be described as a "pinch," like someone snapping an elastic band on the skin. Patients tolerate treatment very well by using a cooling system and/or using a topical anesthetic cream to numb the skin.

Who should be treated with the Polaris WR?

Anyone with unwanted moderate wrinkles, fine lines, superficial acne scarring, or enlarged pores. The Polaris WR is not realistic for wrinkles between the brow or deep folds near the mouth or nose. Individual patient candidacy will be discussed during your consultation.

Are there any risks to treatment?

ANY medical laser procedure may have a slight risk of side effects such as superficial blistering, crusting, or pigmentation changes in the skin. These risks are rare and usually resolve quickly. The Polaris WR incorporates several technological advances that focus on patient safety to minimize these risks and provide greater satisfaction. The laser tip is cooled for skin protection and comfort during the procedure.
